Hi Eva,
Thanks very much, again.

I have been using Chocolate Graphics for marketing purposes since 2008.

I have recommended them to many of my clients to use for the same purpose as I find the product quality excellent, and the service great. In fact me advising them to use the chocolates is one of my first key little pieces of wisdom.

I am a business coach to small businesses in the international education field.

*Originally I was with a large institution and we ordered many different products which I became known for literally worldwide. I then went out on my own. I have a small business and I still find it very cost effective to brand my company using these chocolates. Often I make up my mind last minute, but they always deliver on time.

The actual chocolate (dark) is excellent in taste, so at conferences where I often have them people come up and ask me for them! Now that would be bad if they were just gusing my chocolates, but they read the literature and see how brands need to be associated with a "sense" and you will see why I am remembered, as the best "sense" to be remembered by is taste and that little jolt of feel good hormone that gets released.

I can totally recommend using these products for your business and it was a lucky day when I stumbled upon them at a business meeting and had a taste.
